

Liberty—Still Wanted

If you are a middle-of-the-road American, believing in liberal principles but requiring that they be carried out along the committee lines of the traditional American democracy, then you will agree with what Amos Pinchot said this Wednesday noon at a luncheon of the Board of Trade of New York.

Mr. Pinchot's press release quotes him in part: "As we look back through history, we see that there is something vital about the democratic principle. Perhaps this is because man's love of freedom is really not an affectation. Although the human being, when he becomes confused and frightened, is apt to turn for salvation to some alleged superman, by whom, by the way, he always gets ditched—the moment the crisis is over he goes back to his old preference. For men and women, and children, for that matter, truly and honestly do want to be free."

"And I think we will find that, when this frantic world settles down and people have a little, just a little, margin of security and comfort, they will turn to democracy. Even those who have deserted it—or have never had it. And the European and Asian crises for dictatorship, that is to say, for power concentrated in the hands of a man, or a little group of men, will peter out and come to an end."

No government is perfect, and the noisy and cumbersome operation of the parliamentary forms of a republic make this particular kind of government an easy target for critics who prefer the rule of kings, dictators, or intellectual bureaucrats.

These critics say—that representative government is inefficient and wasteful.

They say—that a democracy can't get anywhere in a hurry.

They are eminently right—there are SOME PLACES a democracy won't go as fast as a nation ruled by one man or one group of men.

The tediousness of debate and slowness of action, required by majority rule under constitutional government, are the very things that not only protect men against the inroads of public bureaucrats upon private citizens, but also protect the institution of government itself against foreign enemies.

As you read these words, there are only three great democracies left among all the great nations of the world—England, France and the United States.

Only three nations, mark you, where an editor can publish what he thinks, a private citizen speak what he thinks, about public matters, without running risk of prison or of losing his life.

What are the "efficiency" defects of democracy when compared with the grave faults against human liberty found in Germany, Italy, Russia and Japan?

And for the practical good that government accomplishes for each individual citizen, the American system surpasses all.

If its parliamentary halls are inefficient, at least its constitutional system has permitted Americans as a class to acquire more automobiles, more bathtubs, more telephones, and more of the other instruments of civilization than all the other peoples of the world combined.

"We must reluctantly agree," he said, "that any representative in either house of congress who is incapable of thinking and acting in the national interest when the nation interest is so clear, is not qualified to represent a section of this country in the House of Representatives, or one of our states in the Senate."

Another speaker, Lewis W. Douglas, blamed the Roosevelt administration, which he once served as budget director, for the current business recession. It was "permitted to continue," he said, "it may even carry the whole group of democracies in its wake."

It was a recession, said Douglas, occurring under unprecedented circumstances "in an environment wholly foreign to any of which the modern world has knowledge."

The causes, he said, were such things as the attempt to "change the functions of the Supreme Court," and the administration's attitude on sit-down strikes. He said the government had regarded "private enterprise as an evil, dishonest and wholly predatory thing," viewing "as a creature of illegitimate finance and unholy intent" the "very force in society which can provide employment."

Selfish Interests Played by Federal Speaker, in Crisis

Treasury Aide Blasts Congressman Seeking Untimely Grants

DOUGLAS CRITICAL

Former Budget Director Blames Recession on President

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Members of congress unwilling to serve the "national interest" by helping to halt "untimely, uneconomic expenditures" and balance the budget were denounced Tuesday night by an administration fiscal officer as unfit to hold their jobs.

Such steps of retrenchment, said Wayne C. Taylor, fiscal assistant secretary of the Treasury, in an address before the Economics Club of New York, were "minimum national welfare requirements."

"The president, the secretary of the Treasury and other administration spokesmen have stated vigorously and repeatedly their conviction that untimely, uneconomic expenditures in the form of public works or excessive subsidies to areas, industries and economic groups must stop," he said.

"Many of our representatives in both houses of congress have endorsed these statements, and polls of public sentiment have clearly indicated that the country renews the necessity for a balanced budget."

Denounces Greed

"We can look at the future with renewed confidence when we see this evidence accumulate, but we can be a little discouraged when we observe the reluctance of special areas, industries and economic groups to remove as much as one foot from the trough or even to move over to make room for a really hungry fellow citizen and the expressions of those who apparently represent these special interests in Congress."

"We must reluctantly agree," he said, "that any representative in either house of congress who is incapable of thinking and acting in the national interest when the nation interest is so clear, is not qualified to represent a section of this country in the House of Representatives, or one of our states in the Senate."

Wayne H. England Thanks Drive Workers for Good Campaign

QUOTA IS REACHED

Bingen and Providence Gifts Listed in Final Report

The Hempstead County Red Cross Membership campaign fund closed Wednesday with a total of $963.96.

The final tabulation of funds included reports by Robert McClure, chairman of the Bingen community, and R. G. Byers, chairman of the drive at Providence.

Fifty cents of every membership will be sent to national headquarters, the balance to remain in the local treasury.

The membership quota for the county is 750. One dollar is required for each membership. Although several persons contributed more than $1 it is believed that the membership quota has been reached.

Wayne H. England, county chairman, expressed thanks to the Rev. Bert Webb, who acted as campaign manager in Hope, and to Reginald Berden and John H. Wade, rural chairman. He also expressed thanks to other rural chairmen and campaign workers who made the drive a success.

Complete Garland Property Deeded for a Court Site

City's Deed to County Made for Two Blocks Instead of One

PETITIONS READY

City Council Clears Way for Petition for Court-house Vote

The city council Tuesday night passed an ordinance deeding blocks 18 and 19 in college addition to the City of Hope to Hempstead County for the site of the proposed new county courthouse.

The latest ordinance repealed a previous ordinance which deeded but one block of land to the county.

The new ordinance includes the land of the entire Garland School property. Officials said this clears the way for the drawing up of petitions to be signed by the voting population of the county.

The petitions are expected to be ready for circulation within the next few days. If the required voting percentage of the county is obtained the county judge will be asked to call an election.

If the election favors moving the courthouse site from Washington to Hope, a second election then would be required in which citizens would vote on the construction cost.

Police Report

Police Chief John W. Ridgill submitted his report for November which showed 33 arrests; fined assessed $265; prisoners assigned to streets to work out fines $108.50; cash collected from fines $156.50; trash hauling $5.50.

A motion by Alderman E. P. Young was passed, which called for the purchase of a short wave radio to be used by the police department. Cost of the radio is not to exceed $50.

Garland Darwin appeared before the council with 14 signed contracts of residents of the Hope-Washington road who asked that an electric line be extended from the municipal plant to that section. The council approved the contract and authorized the lines to be extended, subject to the approval of the Board of Public Affairs which decides on expenditures of more than $300.

The fire department was authorized to spend $75 to burn grass on vacant lots throughout the city to prevent fire hazards. During the month of November the fire department answered 12 alarms which were grass fires.

The council voted to give three awards for the best Christmas decorated homes in the city. The decorations will be judged on their appearance from the street. The awards are expected to be in electrical appliances not to cost more than a total of $30.

Winter Chills South

Winter chilled the South menacing fruit and vegetable crops worth millions of dollars, leaving northern New York snowbound and threatening shipping from the Virginia capes to Portland, Me. At least five deaths were laid to the season's worst cold wave.

Everglades, Louisiana farmers expressed fear their sugar cane crop would suffer. Florida vegetable and berry crops were nipped and citrus growers were alarmed. Vegetables in the Rio Grande valley were damaged.

The New Orleans Weather Bureau warned that a "cold wave with much colder" temperatures would strike Oklahoma, northwest Arkansas and northern, central and southwestern Texas Wednesday or Wednesday night.

Savannah, Ga. had a low of 17.1 degrees and Jacksonville 20, the coldest weather in these cities since January, 1928.

Citrus growers called out helpers to refect smudge pots, truck farmers draped straw and other coverings over tender plants.

Lindberghs Return Home After 2-Year Exile; Sons in England

Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh dine with Captain James E. Roberts of the President Harding during secret passage from Southampton to New York. The Lindberghs, who moved to England after the kidnaping of their first-born son, left their two sons in England. Apparently no one but a few intimates and their shipboard companions knew of the journey, for their arrival at New York was unheralded.

After crossing the Atlantic under the greatest secrecy, Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh (he is directly behind her) hurried from New York to an unannounced destination without revealing the reason for their surprise visit to this country, the first since they testified at the trial of Bruno Hauptmann, electrocuted kidnaper of their son, Charles, Jr.

Asks Army Retain Control of River

Mississippi Planning Head Favors Existing U. S. Agencies

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—L. J. Folse, director of the Mississippi Planning commission told the house rivers and harbors committee Tuesday at a hearing on regional planning that the army engineers should continue to supervise flood control and navigation work.

"The people believe the public obtains a dollar service for every dollar expended by the corps of engineers," he said.

He said reclamation projects should be executed by the Soil Conservation Service and the Forest Service, and that existing government agencies should be utilized as far as possible in any planning program.

Final Estimate of 1937 Shows Yield 18,746,000 Bales

Largest Previous Crop in History 17,978,000, in 1926

Arkansas' Average Yield Per Acre Put at 287 Pounds

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The Department of Agriculture Wednesday forecast a 18,746,000-bale record cotton crop in its final 1937 estimate.

Last month's estimate was 18,243,000 bales, an increase of 503,000 over October.

The previous record was 17,978,000 bales in 1926. Last year 12,359,000 bales came from the fields.

The department's estimates of acre-yield and total production this year included:

Arkansas—Acre-yield 287 pounds; production 1,830,000 bales.

The Bureau of the Census' ginning reports showed ginnings in running bales to December 1, for this year and last year:

Arkansas—1,540,808 this year; 1,232,080 last year.

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—(AP)—Bernard E. Grey, chief engineer for the Asphalt Institute of New York, said Tuesday night that use of cotton fabric in highway construction, soil conservation and mosquito eradication, soil offers a potential market for 100,000 bales of cotton annually.

Thomas H. McDonald, chief of the United States Bureau of Public Roads, another visitor to the eleventh annual asphalt conference here, said there was a potential market for 10,000 bales annually for use in cotton quilts for curing concrete-paved highways.

Grey said the first "cotton road" in the United States, built 10 years ago in South Carolina, (a 10-mile stretch) still is in first class condition. It has been maintained, he said at low cost.

Misbehaving Drunks Must Face the Music

IT is a poor week that does not see some judge in this broad land of ours getting his name in the papers by handing down an unusual decision. This week the distinction seems to be the jurist in Cambridge, Mass., who ruled that a drunken driver whose car killed two people could not be held for manslaughter because he had been too drunk to know what he was doing.

The judge's reasoning is perfectly clear, once you examine it.

A charge of manslaughter, he explained, must be based on "willful, wanton, and reckless" conduct. At the time of the accident the driver in question was drunk—and not just drunk, but awfully drunk. Consequently, said the judge, he was "not in a position to form a judgment or exercise his will"; hence he could not be willful, wanton, or reckless in his conduct, and so the manslaughter charge fell through.

It must be added that the judge did see his way clear to send the man to jail for six months and fine him $200 on a series of drunken-driving charges.

WE get all sorts on the bench, in our somewhat untamed democracy, and we have to take the bitter with the sweet.
And while there is little danger that any other judges will follow the reasoning of this Massachusetts jurist, his decision needs to be picked to pieces for the benefit of the casual drinkers who feel that being drunk relieves a man of a measure of responsibility for his acts.

Those people aren't quite as much a nuisance now as they were during prohibition, when it was considered smart to get awry-eyed. But there are still plenty of them.

They evolved the custom of morning-after apologies to the hostess. A guest might have committed any of any infinite variety of misdemeanors, ranging from poking his hostess under the fifth rib with extended forefinger to upsetting a corrosive highball into the innards of her grand piano; hebitely assumed that if he simply begged, pardon next day, explaining that he had had one too many when it happened, all would be well.

WHAT gets overlooked in this sort of argument, of course, is the inescapable fact that although a man may not be responsible for what he does while drunk, he is most certainly responsible for getting drunk in the first place. No one holds a gun at his head and makes him drink. If, having drunk, he can't behave, he ought to take the responsibility.

Which gets us back to the Massachusetts judge.
What he says about willful, wanton, and reckless conduct may be quite true. Yet it should hardly take the learning of a judge to see that a man who, about to drive an auto, takes a large quantity of alcohol into his system, is by that very fact guilty of willful, wanton, and reckless conduct—whether he subsequently runs over anybody or not.

Britain Bluffing?

NEWSPAPER readers might be justified in taking with a grain of salt—or possibly a whole handful—the stirring declaration in London that Britain is prepared to take "rigorous" action to protect her rights in Shanghai if they are infringed upon by the Japanese.

What provoked this declaration, of course, was the Japanese threat to seize control of the entire city, including the international concessions.

That Britain has an enormous financial and commercial stake in Shanghai is beyond question. But somehow, the British government in late years has seemed incapable of taking rigorous action in any international crisis. There was high talk of rigorous action when Mussolini seized Ethiopia, for instance. There was still more, when submarines sank British ships during the Spanish civil war. But when the dust cleared away, Britain was taking it and liking it. Is there any especial reason for thinking it will be any different in China?

Boil Clothing, Bathe and Apply Sulphur Powders to Clean Lice From the Body

This is the concluding article in a series by Dr. Fishburn on body parasites and how they may be eliminated.

(No. 29)

When lice begin to live around the body, particularly in the seams of un-terclothing, they are difficult to remove. In an ordinary search they are not likely to be found on the skin but rather concealed in the clothing and occasionally in the hairy regions. They get on the skin only when hungry.

Sometimes their presence can be detected by the fact that the hairy regions are contaminated by the eggs or nits of the body louse. On other occasions, puncture wounds which they produce are found on the skin surrounded by a slightly bloody area.

Just as soon as the parasites begin to bite, itching occurs. Then the areas are covered with scabs and crusts and there is also the possibility of secondary infection from scratching.

Where the lice have been long inhabitants of the skin, discolorations may eventually occur. In fact, among the inhabitants of flophouses, the presence of these organisms is so frequent that they occasionally attack in such numbers as to produce serious disorders of the skin, called "Yega-hond's disease."

Chief danger of such infestation is the possibility of the development of abscesses and boils which when greatly infected may even produce death.

Body lice usually bite around the neck, shoulders and buttocks.

In ridding the body of these parasites, it is necessary to boil all the clothing or to steam it to sterilization in high pressure steam sterilizers. The organisms on the body must be removed as well by giving hot soap baths and applying dusting powders containing sulphur.

Lice which live in the lower areas of the abdomen are seldom seen on children. They bite deeply and almost invariably produce little spots of blood and inflammation.

Sometimes their biting is associated with the appearance of discolorations of the skin, believed to be due to the fact that the poisonous saliva of the pa-asite breaks up the red coloring matter of the blood and leaves it under the skin.

For the treatment of this type of infestation, it is customary to use strong ointments containing toxic drugs which the physician prescribes. Sometimes the drugs used irritate the skin. They are, however, necessary first to destroy the parasites. The irritations may then be overcome by the use of soothing ointments.

FARM AGENT

Home Meat Supply
The use of a few acres to produce the family's home meat supply will give a very high return when compared with cash returns from ordinary crops.

One brood sow can be maintained very cheaply on the average farm, the county agent said, because it will consume certain feed that otherwise would be wasted. There is also possible a rotation of grazing and feed crops in the hog lots that will make for cheap growth of two litters of pigs from one sow during the year.

The farm family is the farm's best market for four or five of these pigs when finished. Through proper cutting and curing methods, as much as 5 cents per pound on foot above the regular market price can be obtained in this manner, pointed out M. W.
Muldrow, extension animal husband-man, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture.

Farm families need other meats beside pork, Mr. Muldrow said, and again there is another opportunity to get a high income per acre from a few acres. Grazing experiments conducted by the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture show that when a full grazing season on one acre of pasture is provided that 300 to 400 pounds of beef per acre can be produced. A yearling carried through the summer on such pastures with milk cows or a beef cow with her early spring calf will produce this beef.

Dairy Cows

Dairy cows should be allowed to graze small grain winter pastures as frequently as possible during the winter months, but don't overgraze them.
Grazing too close, too early, or heavy tramping in wet weather may reduce the pasture yield. Grazing too many hours in one day with long periods between grazing days may reduce the effectiveness of the available pasture acreage to the dairy cow.

Grazing for a half hour or an hour every day, twice a week or once a week as far as weather and growth will permit, is much better for the dairy cow than grazing all day at less frequent intervals. This system of grazing will increase the value of winter grass for the cows, advises V.

ORDINANCE NO. 521

An Ordinance to be an Ordinance, entitled, "An Ordinance Authorizing the Sale of Certain Lands to Hemp-stead County, Arkansas, and for other Purposes."

WHEREAS, Hempstead County, Arkansas, is in need of a new Courthouse; and

WHEREAS, The City of Hope is near the center of population of the County, and a large part of the legal business of the County originates in Hope; and

WHEREAS, There is a strong demand on the part of the citizens of the County to move the Courthouse to Hope, Arkansas; and

WHEREAS, The law requires that a Courthouse site must be secured and tendered to the County before an election to move the county seat can be called;

NOW, THEREFORE, Be It Ordained by the City Council of the City of Hope, Arkansas:

SECTION 1: That the City of Hope, Arkansas, for and in consideration of the sum of Ten Dollars ($10.00), and for other good and valuable considerations, convey by general Warranty Deed to Hempstead County, Arkansas, the following described lands, situated in Hope, Hempstead County, Arkansas, to-wit:

Blocks Eighteen (18) and Nineteen (19), in College Addition to the City of Hope, Arkansas.

SECTION 2: That the Mayor and City Clerk of the City of Hope, Arkansas, be and they are hereby, authorized and directed upon payment of the consideration mentioned in Section One (1) herof, to execute good and sufficient deed conveying said lands described in Section One hereto, to Hempstead County, Arkansas.

SECTION 3: That all ordinances, and or parts of ordinances, in conflict herewith, and especially Ordinance No. 519 of the Ordinances of the City of Hope, Arkansas, are hereby repealed; and that because of the fact that a good and sufficient deed must be executed to the County, and the title to the land so conveyed approved, and the further fact that the title cannot be approved until thirty days from the date the ordinance is passed authorizing such conveyance, an emergency is hereby declared, and this ordinance shall be in full force and effect from and after its passage and publication.

Passed and approved December 7, 1937.

ber 8, 1937.

Attest: ALBERT GRAVES
T. R. Billingsley Mayor
City Clerk

versity of Arkansas College of Agriculture.
The fresh, succulent growth provided by small-grain winter pastures is very beneficial in wintering dairy cows, Mr. Gregg said. Winter pastures provide cheap feed to supplement stored roughage and grains, and their succulence stimulates milk production and tones up the body functions to improve the health and vigor of the cow.

Forest Planting

Forest planting can be done any time when growth is not taking place, which is usually between the time the hardwood leaves fall in autumn and when they appear in the spring. Fortunately, this period comes when other farm work is not pressing.

When there is danger of freezing, it is often best to plant during the latter part of February or early March.
Says M. H. Bruner, Extension Forester, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture, planting subject to alternate freezing and thawing during the planting period are often badly injured by heaving.

Frost heaval, Mr. Bruner said, is usually more injurious on southern and eastern slopes than on northern or western exposures and on exposed soils. Freezing alone seldom causes any damage; it is the alternate freezing and thawing that tends to heave or loosen the planted seedlings, preventing them from getting well established during the first season.

Farmers should plan to put some of their idle acres to work growing trees for pulpwood, sawlogs, or other forest products, Mr. Bruner said. Boys should take an active part, and thereby be taught that the trees they plant will help provide them with an income in years to come.

Peach Brown-Rot

The Egyptian mummies from the pyramids are supposed to carry a "curse" to persons discovering or interfering with them. There are "mummies" in Hempstead county this winter that will certainly bring a "curse" to next year's peach crop if not removed, says Clifford L. Smith, county agent.

These "mummies" are the shriveled, thrusten peaches that were overlooked when the last crop was picked and may still be on the tree or on the ground. They furnish the principal "carryover" for the brown-rot, the disease which destroys apparently sound peaches while in shipment, according to P. T. Ecton, extension horticulturist, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture.

Remove these "mummies" and other trash from the peach orchard this fall so that the diseases will not be able to form spores and spread for next season, Mr. Ecton said. Contrary to general opinion, the brown-rot cankers on the tree branches and twigs are not a dangerous source of brown-rot as they usually heal over after the first season.

Woodell to Captain 1938 Razorback Team

FAVETTEVILLE, Ark. — Lloyd Woodell, veteran center from Fordyce, was elected captain of the 1938 University of Arkansas football squad at the annual dinner given by President J. C. Futrell in honor of the 27 lettermen Tuesday night.

Lloyd Montgomery, halfback whose home is in Bauxite, was named sub-captain.

Both Woodell and Montgomery have had two full seasons of varsity experience.

The retiring captains, Jack Robbins and Jim Benton, made brief talks, and members of the coaching staff and President Futrell also spoke.

It was announced that Jim Benton, declared by Coach Thompson to be the best end he ever saw, had been awarded the Houston Post trophy as the most valuable lineman in the Southwest Conference.

Old Pine Trees

Whenever I come to an old pine tree, something seems to be talking to me. I feel its breath and I hear its sigh. As a pine tree will when the winds go by. I hear it tell how the cones pass. Like ripples that wave in a field of grass. How the storms that wrestled and swayed and beat. Have fallen asleep at a pine tree's feet. And there's always a calm when the pines whisper.

The holiday season of Thanksgiving and Christmas affords dramatic opportunity to lay a lasting foundation of plant appreciation in one's mind. Few of us realize that through Nature's own prehistoric fossil records in stone scientists have proven that plants existed upon this earth long before animals and man. And if the plants had lost their struggle for life, no one has yet discovered how the animals and men could have existed. Nurtured to the holly and mistletoe, the pine family plays a great part in our Thanksgiving and Christmas decorations, for without such decorations, Christmas would be very dry indeed. By the pine family we mean such evergreens as spruce, hemlocks, firs, cedars, junipers and larches. The first green light to meet the sea-wary eyes of our Pilgrim forefathers was that of the great pine forests. So grateful were they for its protection, its food and its fuel that they placed a picture of a pine tree upon their first money, calling it the pine tree shilling. In Rome, the pine was used for temple beams, the beginning of one of the greatest industrial promotions of the world, the manufacture of lumber for the construction of house, and needed timber for numerous other necessities of life. This evergreen tree has always been of indispensable service to man and animal, not only furnishing wood for ship, temple and home construction, but it has been a source of healing resins and essential turpentine. And as far back as yuletide legends record, the pine family of evergreens has played a leading role among the symbols of holiday cheer.

Circle No. 3 W. M. S. First Methodist church, held its last meeting of the year on Tuesday with a 4 o'clock, covered dish luncheon at the home of the leader, Mrs. W. G. Allison, avenue B. Covers were laid for 23 members and four guests, Rev. and Mrs. Fred R. Harrison, Mrs. R. M. Briant, and Mrs. Edwin Ward. Following the luncheon Mrs. Allison presided over the final business period, opening with a very beautiful devotion by Mrs. R. M. LaGrone. During the interesting program, Mrs. Vesey-Crutchfield read a very impressive paper on "Missions" and Miss Kathryn Frank read a Christmas Story and Mrs. R. M. Briant spoke very earnestly on the subject of "Missions" and the program closed with words of appreciation from Mrs. Allison, who was presented with a lovely gift for her untiring efforts toward the success of the year's accomplishments. The decorations were very lovely stressing the Christmas motif.

Friends will be glad to know that Mrs. A. D. Middlebrooks is reported as improving from a recent major operation, recently undergone at the Julia Chester hospital.

Mrs. John Roial of Monroe, La., who underwent an operation at Julia Chester hospital Saturday morning is reported as resting well this morning.

The P. T. A. council met at the city hall Tuesday afternoon, with a good attendance. Rev. Fred Harrison conducted the devotional. C. Blackburn, executive secretary of Teachers Retirement System was the guest speaker. Miss Henry announced that Miss Willie Lawson would be the speaker for the January meeting.

extensive systems of runways for airports—and substitution of an all-concrete or other hard-surfaced landing field to accommodate probable increase in air travel.

In its military aspects, there arises the possibility of utilizing readily convertible sections of existing paved highways.

Use of the tricycle gear likely would necessitate important changes in plane design, officers said. "It will have to be pulled up and stowed away while the plane is in flight," they agreed.

Through resultant new problems of load distribution and change in the plane's relative position to the ground, it was Major Greene's belief that widespread adoption of the new-type undercarriage might make desirable a return to "high wing" monoplane construction.

Officers appeared agreed that use of the tricycle gear would eliminate many landing hazards.

Rather than pay $740 fine and costs when convicted of violating the Pennsylvania school laws through refusal to send his 14-year-old daughter to junior high school, Aaron King, above, well-to-do Amish farmer of Honey Brook, Pa., went to jail. carried excess baggage. Don't be one of those guests who cause a lot of elaborate planning. If your host and hostess like to sit around and just talk this is a good chance to see how good a conversationalist you are. Young people don't need to appear erudite. All they have to do is show a little interest.

Size up your host and hostess and try to chime in with their plans. It's one of the best exercises you could have in diplomacy.

Grab every opportunity to prove yourself socially equal to any situation. Remember that a big part of your education is designed to teach you to get on with all types of people.

Don't stay out until all hours—even if Albert, Jr., assures you in his best colic manner that's what the old folks expect. Induce him, as tactfully as you can, to come in near the hour his parents suggest.

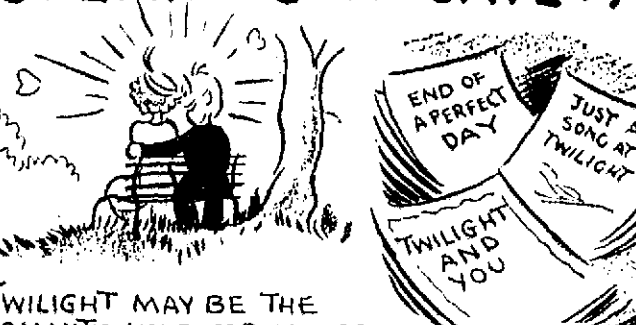

Don't use the family car—unless the older people insist. If they do, be sure you have your driver's license and take the best possible care of the machine.

That includes leaving as much gas in the tank as you found there.

If you're to be a guest on Christmas, you may take one nice gift to the family as a whole. Or you may give a family gift and add another for the member whose guest you are. You also may provide one small gift for each member of the family—with an additional one or two for emergencies. They needn't be elaborate. But they must reflect a little time and thought.

HARRY HENRY—Indian, member of Harry's party.

Yesterday, Bob and Melissa are escorted down and out of the cavern and into a lost world—a world of strange ancient Indians who know no English and who worship the sun.

CHAPTER XVIII

ROBERT BARRY was a trained scientist, specializing in the antiquities of man, fascinated always by their history, their manners, customs, languages. Because North American man seems literally to have been cradled in our Southwest, Bob Barry had centered his studies there. He knew many things from books and professors, many more from work in the field. And—common sense taught him not a few.

"Remember the feller starving to death in Paris, 'Lissa?" she laughed at him. They had maneuvered to get more food, and a couple of hours for rest and sleep.

"The American who saved his life with a pencil," Bob resumed. "He was trying to make the cave waiter understand him. Finally in desperation he sketched a picture of a cow, and so had a sizzling T-bone steak for dinner."

She laughed again. "Will you order T-bones now?" she suggested. "And you might draw a chicken and a bakery and a dish of peas, if your art is dependable."

He grinned, but he was serious too. He had some ideas. They had been resting inside a windowless room, on floor beds made of grass and woven fiber blankets. Brown folk peered in the lone door from time to time. Evidently these watchful ones saw when they awoke, for a crowd greeted them outside again.

For two hours and more, then, Bob Barry "conversed" with the man who had accepted the watch. He was what he appeared to be—the leader, or chieftain. He wore more clothes than the others, but clothing in general evidently was not a bother to these folk; his pieces were ornamental, marks of distinction and rank.

BOB'S hunch was right. The brown chief could understand much of the sign language which is universal among wilderness people. It is not always the same in every nation, but there is invariably a similarity. Close observers can "interpret" it readily, for after all it is communication reduced to the simplest of motions, about the things common to all. Bob could understand more of it than he could "speak," which is usual with any foreign language. But he labored at it, not unpleasantly, for most of the afternoon.

"Listen 'Lissa, we've stumbled onto something bigger and stranger than we could have hoped for in our wildest dreams." Bob was beaming when he joined Mary Melissa again. She had waited near the chieftain's house.

"Could you understand him, Bob? Did you learn much?" "Plenty! It wasn't all easy, for him or me either, but we had a great talk. These people are not Indians, I'm convinced of that. I mean, not any tribes we know or have record of. They may be kin to the Hopis and Zunis and Acomas, but they're a tribe of their own, right enough."

"Why 'Lissa honey, know what that old chief told me? This is the answer to our main question. This tribe is the remnant of the cliff dwellers!"

"Really, Bob?" "Yes! Centuries ago, evidently, the ancestors of these villagers built Defiance Castle, and lived up there for protection. They farmed this valley, which has some springs in it, and the river courses on the other side of the cliff near our camp, remember? But enemies came raiding. They killed most of the other cliff dwellers, or took off the girls to be slaves. Probably the enemies were Yaquis, or Apaches."

"This castle, though, was hardest to attack, because it was so high and hard to get at." "Then what happened, Bob?" The girl was intensely interested.

"THESE people, I mean their ancestors, made a smart move. They destroyed their front ladders, such as we built, abandoned their cliff home, and came into this hidden valley to live. The enemies didn't know about this valley, and there was enough rich soil here to support the few surviving cliff people. See?" "Yes, but wouldn't the raiders find the valley in time?" "No, they didn't. The raiders didn't live in this area. They came in from many miles away. When they thought all the cliff people had been killed or fled, they ceased coming."

"But Bob, why haven't white people found it? You say it's new to science, and these people are living as they did 500 years ago." "Look around us, 'Lissa. See the great cliffs—there? And there? And on all sides? This really is a wide box canyon, a shut-in valley."

It was all sort of fantastic, but it made sense. The Lost People—Bob formally named them that—were indeed a turn-back of the human calendar. Their kingdom would be a microscopic point, on the vast map of the United States or of Mexico. And by a freak of geography and circumstance, they had remained completely isolated from all the rest of the world, unknown to it, and it unknown to them. Probably it could have happened nowhere else in North America save in this arid, almost unknown southwest.

"At least that's the best I can do at interpreting the story old what'shisname told me," Bob concluded, to Melissa, "except for one rather important thing. In fact, I think it's extremely important to you and me, Melissa."

"What is it, Bob? What did he say about us?"

"Why these Lost People think we're messengers from their god, the Sun. We're pretty important, demi-gods or something. We brought them a watch, yellow and shiny, a piece of the sun, as you observed. Now they beg us not to destroy them, not to reveal them to their ancient enemies outside. See?"

"Oh! I can't imagine all this. I just can't, Bob. It wouldn't be possible, if it weren't true!" "Check, I agree. But here we are. Facts are facts. They never saw white people before, especially a beautiful white girl. You impress them tremendously, sweetheart. I mean, you're a greater sun god than I, because you're fairer, daintier, I imagine. They're going to stage a big party, a pow-wow and dance and all that, for our benefit. . . . Scared?"

Mary Melissa was so frightened at all this that she trembled a bit. But she dimpled at Bob Barry.

"Never, with you here, dear?" she declared.

Rialto-Saenger
Youth, romance, cheering stands, and a new and daring approach to the subject of professionalism in college football are all offered in "Saturday's Heroes," the big bargain night (see ad page 3) picture about the great autumn pastime.

In a story alive with action and thrills, "Saturday's Heroes" delves deeply into the whys and wherefores of the controversial subject of professionalism in intercollegiate sport and explains where the money goes when the public pays for exorbitant prices for seats to the big game. Van Hefflin and Marian Marsh are cast in the leading roles of the film, and a large number of supporting players include Richard Lane, Alan Bruce, Willie Best, Frank M. Thomas.

And at the Saenger for Wednesday night we have the second appearance of old "Dr. Quizzer" who will again give away $5 in small awards for the correct answers to his simple questions and this week the big award has been doubled to $20 for the correct answer to his major question. . . . And here's a tip: "The manager says it's a 'push-over' . . . so you'd better be there. On the screen Francis Lederer and Madeleine Carroll are showing for the last time in "It's All Yours."
